Details

Archetypes of Internal Motivations	Universality, upliftment and wisdom
What makes him happy	adventure, excitement, novelty and change. Breaking down barriers and any forms of physical constraints and limitations. Sampling all the joys life has to offer.
His deep motivation is	the pursuit and advocacy of ideas, truth and knowledge. Advancement of some form of expertise and professional growth. Illuminating and inspiring others to make the world more perfect. He is amazing at seeing the bigger picture.
To cheer him up	tell him a joke or a fun story or go out for a quality meal and movie. He loves to make a meal at home too. Ask him to help you solve some personal problem, and he will be showering you with 'out of the box' solutions. Provide him with an opportunity to express his creative ideas.
Acknowledge his desire to be	Optimistic and unique.
Most disturbed by	isolation, confrontation.
Key to successful relationships lies in	discovering courage while letting go of control
Be patient	when he gets too critical, perfectionistic and impatient. He must learn that in order to accept others, he first needs to accept himself as he is.
In addition, he is also attracted to	multitasking and all forms of senses and communication as he looks to expand his knowledge of the world. He likes to sample all of life's pleasures and break through any confinements, so he can eventually share these experiences with others.
Aspects of Personality	Independence, leadership, initiation
What is he like on an average day	he is cooperative, emotionally intelligent, tactful and desires to help. Don't leave him out of your plans, and try not to forget his birthday.
On a tough day	because of a strong need for ethics and empathy, he might occasionally appear too impulsive and emotional.
He typically communicates	with passion about humanitarian or futuristic concepts, sometimes sheltering away from the world to recover energy.
Help him avoid experiencing	others keeping secrets from him and not being allowed to retreat into private space.
In addition, he is a kind of person who	is considerate and cooperation oriented, will listen attentively and offer empathy towards others.
Externally, people perceive his as	popular and empathetic.
Archetypes of Challenges	Wild side, rebel, freedom
When feeling out of balance	he should not make too many promises and over burden himself. Stop being too rigid with words. Lighten up on the word 'should' – warm up his heart and accept things as they are.
Lessons and challenges	revolve around the opinion about the way others should be like rather than they way they are.
What areas of life will require some effort to master	learning to accept himself first is the key to accepting others. Enhancing self-esteem and tolerance, while letting go of self-judgement and perfectionism. He might have felt threatened or pushed too far as a child, physically or emotionally, carrying these wounds throughout life. Often, the thing he is criticizing in others is what he wants to change about himself.
To help him	if he is stressed out, encourage to take a time out, meditate in nature to restore inner calm and clarity or to go for a jog along the river. If he feels lonely, encourage to stop hiding, pick up the phone and call someone. Play some music to feel good again. Because he can feel misunderstood, learning to express feelings rather than just thoughts is key.
Archetypes of Talents	'Originates creative solutions
Gifted at being	courageous and strong
He has a natural ability	'to work hard within a structure that values details, tradition, dedication and loyalty. Can work with numbers, words, and any other structures well. Can be be of service and provide counsel to others remaining neutral and balanced. Steady, trustworthy, and will not give up easily.
